

Improve HR Productivity

HR is evolving away from an administrative role and now being called upon to provide a high impact strategic function . . . often with fewer resources.

Yet it's difficult to move to the strategic level while caught up in the day-to-day management of programs such as open enrollment, compensation planning, or performance assessment. The manual effort involved in managing these programs can be enormous and often leaves few resources available to concentrate on business analytics and the development of human capital strategies for your business partners.

Amber solves this problem by increasing productivity. Amber is a program management solution that has been specifically designed for HR departments. It combines a web-based tool with best practice program management processes & performance metrics. An easily customizable dashboard gives an overview of all your HR initiatives with drill down capability into each program. Individuals can be assigned tasks and enter status updates in one central location. While key performance indicators enable you to identify problems before they occur.

Amber is guaranteed to increase performance if you are currently using spreadsheets & manual processes to manage your programs. It enables you to predict your milestones with confidence and provides a structured approach for managing both ongoing programs and one-off projects. Amber stores a template of all your past initiatives and allows you to revise and launch them next time with minimal effort.

You might already have an HRIS system. Amber is the next step in increasing productivity. A typical HRIS automates HR processes & stores information, . . . Amber manages programs and increases accountability & control.

Client Testimonial:

"I needed to manage an increasing workload with less staff. By using Amber and the best practices Intellilink helped develop, we increased productivity by enabling business owners to become effective project managers virtually over night."
